About Credit Cards and You

Credit Cards and You explains the features and costs of credit cards. It comes in a multi-piece “kit” format containing this guide and other booklets, a glossary of key terms and a worksheet to help you choose a credit card. In addition, several comparison tables help you compare the characteristics of credit cards available in Canada, including the service fees related to certain credit card transactions.

Throughout these booklets you will find references to the kit. If you have not received the full kit and would like to, please contact FCAC for your free copy.

The other documents available as part of the Credit Cards and You kit are:

Getting the Most from Your Credit Card: Understanding the Terms and Conditions

Want to save money and avoid problems with your credit card? Understanding your credit card's benefits and risks, how your issuer calculates your interest charges and how you can benefit from introductory rates will help you make the most of your credit card. Read about this and more in Getting the Most from Your Credit Card.

Playing It Safe: How to Protect Your Credit Card and Credit History

Just about everybody has a credit file, but where is it kept and is it accurate? How can you protect yourself if your card is lost or stolen? Playing It Safe answers these questions for you, and quite a few more.

Secured Credit Cards

The Secured Credit Cards comparison table includes information about secured credit cards and offers a handy comparison table of different secured credit cards available across Canada. If you've had trouble getting an unsecured credit card, the Secured Credit Cards comparison table is for you.

Credit Card Comparison Tables

The following pull-outs compare the features and costs of various credit cards available from credit card issuers across Canada:

- Standard Credit Cards (low-rate and regular-rate)
- Gold Credit Cards (low-rate and regular-rate)
- Platinum Credit Cards (low-rate and regular-rate)
- U.S. Dollar Credit Cards
- Student Credit Cards (low-rate and regular-rate)
- Secured Credit Cards
- Retail Credit Cards
- Charge Cards

The following two tables compare the service fees from various credit card issuers that are applicable to certain credit card transactions:

- Service fees on Visa, MasterCard and American Express credit card transactions
- Service fees on retail credit card transactions.

Worksheet to Help You Choose a Credit Card

This handy pull-out is designed to make your comparison shopping easier. Take this easy-to-follow table with you to your credit card issuer and fill it in. When you're finished, you'll have the information you need to choose the best credit card for you.

Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit

Annual interest rate, cash advance, grace period, prime rate, security deposit ... these are all important terms that you'll find in the Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit. Many of the terms you'll find in your credit card agreement are also defined here.

Saving Money with a Low-Rate Credit Card or Line of Credit

The best way to avoid interest on your credit card is to pay off your entire balance every month. If you can't do this, you might benefit by switching to a form of credit with a lower interest rate.

- One option is a low-rate credit card. These cards usually have an annual fee, but they could be beneficial considering that their annual interest rate is around 12 per cent. Other credit cards have interest rates ranging from 16 to 28.8 per cent. Some credit card issuers can offer you the low rate without actually changing your credit card.
- Or, you could keep your higher-interest-rate credit card (it may have attractive extra features) and obtain a line of credit. A line of credit usually carries an interest rate of about 9 per cent, which is even lower than a low-rate credit card. To get the benefit of the low rate, use your line of credit each month to pay your credit card balance in full – you'll also benefit from the interest-free period on new purchases if you pay by the due date.

The following table shows how much you'd save by using a low-rate credit card or a line of credit, instead of a credit card with a higher rate of interest.

	Regular-Rate Credit Card	Low-Rate Credit Card	Line of Credit
Average monthly balance	$2,500	$2,500	$2,500
Annual interest rate <sup>1</sup>	x 18%	x 12%	x 8.75%
Annual interest charges	= $450	= $300	= $218.75
Annual fee <sup>1</sup>	+ $0	+ $20	+ $0
Total annual cost	= $450	= $320	= $218.75

<sup>2</sup> This example assumes you carry a constant balance of $2,500 and that you make all minimum payments on time. Otherwise, your interest rate may increase, or you may be subject to additional fees that will increase your overall costs. If you compare the low-rate card with a retail card for the same outstanding balance, the savings are even higher.

Saving Money by Paying Your Bills Early

If you can't pay your credit card balance in full by the due date, you can still save money by paying as much as you can before the due date. This reduces your daily balance earlier, so the interest charged on next month's statement will be based on a smaller outstanding balance. The following example shows how this cuts down on interest costs.

Example: Saving Money by Paying Your Bills Early

Mrs. Smith's credit card balance on January 20 is $3,000, and her next payment is due on February 19. Her card carries an annual interest rate of 18.5 per cent. This works out to a daily interest rate of 0.05068 per cent, which is used in the calculations in the table below. (The daily interest rate is the annual interest rate divided by the number of days in the year.)

Mrs. Smith knows she won't be able to pay the balance in full, but she has $2,000 she can use for a partial payment. Instead of waiting until February 19 to make this payment, she makes it early, on January 20. By doing so, she saves approximately $12.00 in interest payments on her February statement. The following table shows how this works.

	No Early Payment (Using Average Daily Balance Method)	Early Credit Card Payment of $2,000 (Using Average Daily Balance Method)
Jan. 1 to Jan. 4 – No transactions	$0 for 4 days	$0 for 4 days
Jan. 5 to Jan. 19	$0 + $3,000 purchase of Jan. 5	$0 + $3,000 purchase of Jan. 5 = $3,000 for 15 days
Jan. 20 to Jan. 31	= $3,000 for 27 days	$3,000 – $2,000 payment of Jan. 20 = $1,000 for 12 days
Calculation of Average Daily Balance	$($0 \times 4 \text{ days}) + ($3,000 \times 27 \text{ days})$ 31 days in the billing period = Average daily balance of $2,612.90	$($0 \times 4 \text{ days}) + ($3,000 \times 15 \text{ days})$ $+ ($1,000 \times 12 \text{ days})$ 31 days in the billing period = Average daily balance of $1,838.71
Total Interest Charged	Average daily balance x Daily interest rate x Number of days in the billing period = $2,612.90 x 0.05068% x 31 days = $41.05	Average daily balance x Daily interest rate x Number of days in the billing period = $1,838.71 x 0.05068% x 31 days = $28.89
Total Interest Saved	$0	$12.16

While her savings of $12.16 may not sound like a lot, Mrs. Smith has actually lowered her February interest charges by 29.6 per cent. Over time, reducing your interest charges this way can save you a lot of money, especially if you carry a large balance every month.

Making Your Credit Card Payments

It's important to pay your credit card bill on time. If you don't, you'll face extra interest charges and possible penalties such as an increase in your interest rate. Your credit card issuer might even cancel your card.

What Happens If You Make a Late Payment

If you don't pay by the due date indicated on your statement, you'll be charged interest on the entire amount you owe until you pay it in full. This could also affect your credit history in a negative way.

In addition, if your credit issuer uses "Method 2" of applying the interest-free period, you'll automatically lose the interest-free period on any new purchases that appear on your next statement. This means that, next month, you'll pay interest on all your new purchases, even if you pay that bill on time and in full. For an explanation of Method 2, see Getting the Most from Your Credit Card, available in this kit.

How to Make Sure Your Payment Is Not Late

Because it's so important to make your credit card payment by the due date, it's a good idea to know how long it will take to process the payment. For example, if you make a payment on a weekend or holiday, it isn't processed until the first business day following that weekend or holiday. Knowing about these delays will help you make your payments on time.

To find out how long it will take to process your payment, look at the following payment options. Since these examples describe the usual amount of time to process a payment, check with your credit card issuer to see whether their processing times are the same.

Option 1: Sending a cheque by regular mail

Allow four to five business days (Monday to Friday, except for statutory holidays) for your bill payment to reach the credit card issuer. Your credit card issuer will usually deposit your cheque on the date it is received (provided it is a business day) and will consider that you have paid it on that date, unless the cheque is post-dated.

Tips

- Some credit issuers accept post-dated cheques. In this case, send your payment as soon as you get your credit card statement.
- If you don't use a post-dated cheque, send your payment well in advance of the due date on your statement.
- Make sure your account contains enough money to cover the cheque. If the cheque is returned because of non-sufficient funds (NSF), you'll be charged interest on the amount you owe until you pay it in full. You may also be charged NSF fees by the card issuer and your financial institution.

Option 2: Visiting a Teller at a Financial Institution

If you pay by cash, by a withdrawal from your account or by cheque the teller will stamp the payment date on your statement and stub (the tear-off portion of your statement). You're considered to have made your bill payment on that date. Payments made during extended banking hours (on a weekend or after approximately 3 p.m.) will be considered as having been made the next business day.

Tips

- Before you visit a teller, make sure you know which financial institutions will accept your bill payment. Ask your credit card issuer or refer to your statement.
- If you pay by cheque, make sure your account contains enough money to cover it. If the cheque is returned because of non-sufficient funds (NSF), you'll be charged interest on the amount you owe until you pay it in full. You may also be charged NSF fees by the card issuer and your financial institution.

Option 3: Using an Automated Banking Machine (ABM)

If you do not have to deposit the stub (your bill payments automatically appear on the screen) you will be considered to have made your payment on that day, provided you made the payment before 3:00 p.m. If you are paying after hours (on a weekend, holiday or after 3:00 p.m.), your credit card payment will be considered as having been paid the next business day.

If you are depositing the stub in an envelope, you are considered to have made your payment the next business day. This is because branch staff need time to empty the ABMs and verify the contents of the envelopes.

Option 4: Using Telephone or Internet Banking

If you make a payment during business hours (before 3 p.m.), you are considered to have made your bill payment on that date. If you are paying after hours (on a weekend, holiday or after 3:00 p.m.) your credit card payment will be considered as having been paid on the next business day.

Option 5: Using a Pre-Authorized Payment Agreement

To pay your credit card bill using this method, you must sign a pre-authorized payment agreement authorizing the credit card issuer to withdraw the money directly from your bank account. The agreement outlines the terms and conditions related to withdrawals from your account. Among other things, the agreement indicates:

- the amount to be withdrawn each month, and whether this is a fixed amount or if it will vary depending on your credit card balance (the total balance you owe, or just the minimum payment required);
- the date on which the amount will be taken from your account.

Your bill payment will be made on the due date indicated on your statement, because the credit card issuer will withdraw the funds directly from your bank account on that day.

Tips

- Keep track of your payments to ensure you have enough money in your account to cover all of your withdrawals. If your pre-authorized debit payment is returned for non-sufficient funds (NSF), you will be charged interest on the amount you owe until you pay in full. You may also be charged NSF fees by the credit card issuer and your financial institution.
- If you decide to cancel your pre-authorized payment agreement, you must send a written notice of this to the credit issuer. Keep a copy for your files.

How to Use Up a Credit Balance

If your credit card bill payment is larger than your outstanding balance, you'll end up with a credit balance in your credit card account. This can happen if:

- you were not sure of how much you owed (for example, if you lost your statement or were on vacation when your statement arrived) and paid more to cover the balance, or
- you returned a purchase after the statement date, and didn't use up the money refunded by making other purchases.

Some card issuers will send you a cheque if the balance has been sitting in your account for a certain period of time. Other issuers may offer this service if you ask for it, but you may be charged a fee.

If you don't receive a cheque, you are best to use up this credit balance by making essential purchases on your credit card, such as groceries or gas.

Or, you can make a cash withdrawal from an automated banking machine (ABM). However, doing this may cost more than you think. This is because your transaction will be considered a cash advance, and the following charges could apply:

- a transaction fee of up to 4 per cent of the amount advanced, depending on the credit card issuer (for more details, see the Service Fees comparison tables included in this kit);
- interest charges on this cash advance, from the day you make the transaction until you pay the amount in full.

The following example shows you how this works.

*Example: Withdrawing Your Credit Balance
by Taking a Cash Advance*

Statement Date	Details
Apr. 30	Natalie's April credit card statement shows that she has a $500 credit.
May 5	Natalie decides to go to an ABM to withdraw the $500.
May 31	Natalie's May statement shows the following charges: $ 500.00 cash advance (May 5) +$ 5.00 cash advance fee +$ 6.59<sup>1</sup> interest on the $500 cash advance -$ 500.00 CR (credit balance) =$ 11.59 Natalie now owes $11.59 because she used a cash advance to draw against a credit balance on her account.
<sup>1</sup> 18.5 per cent annual interest rate, calculated over 26 days (May 5 to May 31)

Will You Earn Interest on a Credit Balance?

You don't usually earn interest on a credit balance. And, if you leave your credit balance sitting in your account for an extended period of time, you may be charged an "inactive account" fee. For more details, see the Service Fees comparison tables included in this kit.

Money-saving Tips for Using Up a Credit Balance

- Know what fees apply to your credit card, especially fees for cash advance transactions and inactive accounts. Read your credit card agreement carefully or see the Service Fees comparison tables included in this kit.
- Instead of taking a cash advance against a credit card balance, use the credit up by making essential purchases such as groceries or gas.

Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit

Annual interest rate, cash advance, grace period, prime rate, security deposit ... these are all important terms that you'll find in the Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit. Many of the terms you'll find in your credit card agreement are also defined here.

Understanding Your Credit History

If you have ever taken out a bank loan, had a mortgage or used a credit card, you have a credit history. In Canada, your credit history, along with the credit histories of millions of other people, is recorded in files maintained by three major credit bureaus: Equifax, TransUnion and Northern Credit Bureaus Inc. Your credit file will be held by at least one of them.

As you use credit with banks, credit card companies and other businesses, they send information about your payment record to the bureaus, and this information becomes part of your credit history. This history paints a picture of your past and current financial situation. It contains records of:

- your recent place(s) of residence;
- your employment history;
- your current debts;
- whether you pay your bills on time;
- whether you have been denied a loan by a financial institution in the past; and
- your history of bankruptcy, if any.

When you sign a document such as a lease or a credit card application, you are authorizing the other party to verify your credit history.

Checking Your Credit File

You should request a copy of your credit file at least once a year and check it for accuracy. The credit bureaus usually provide copies free of charge if you request that they be sent to you by mail. There is usually a small fee if you make the request on the Internet.

To obtain a copy of your credit file, contact Equifax, TransUnion and Northern Credit Bureaus Inc.:

Northern Credit Bureaus Inc.

Correcting an Error on Your Credit File

If you feel that the information in your file is incorrect, you may contact the credit bureau directly to have it investigated further. Before making a correction on your credit file, however, the bureau will have to contact the organization that reported the information to confirm whether or not an error has been made.

Credit bureaus are subject to provincial legislation. In most provinces, credit bureaus must resolve disputes within 30 days. This means that once the credit bureau has contacted the organization that reported the information, if they confirm that an error has been made, they have 30 days to correct your credit file. If the bureau confirms that the information has been reported accurately but you are still not satisfied with the result, you can submit a brief statement, explaining your position. This will be added to your credit file.

To avoid delays in correcting errors on your credit file, you can contact the organization that provided the incorrect information (your financial institution or your credit card issuer) and ask that they correct the error with the credit bureau. If your financial institution will not correct the error, you may ask them about their complaint-handling process. Financial institutions that are regulated by the Government of Canada are required, by law, to have such a process in place. This process is designed to resolve disputes between consumers and their financial institutions. For information regarding your financial institution's complaint-handling process, contact FCAC toll-free at: 1-866-461-3222, or contact your branch directly.

Building a Credit History with a Credit Card

When you apply for a credit card, the card issuer checks your credit history with one or more of the credit bureaus. Issuers do this to find out whether you're likely to pay back the money you borrow using the card.

Once your application is approved and you start using your card, the issuer reports the activity on your card to the credit bureaus. For example, the issuer will tell the bureaus your outstanding balance and whether you're making the required monthly payments on time. This information helps you build a credit history and establish a credit rating.

It's very important to have a good credit history! If you don't, lenders may refuse to give you a loan (such as a mortgage, car loan or another personal loan). If they do give you a loan, they may charge you a higher interest rate for it. A poor credit history can affect your life in other ways, too. For example, landlords can find out your credit history, and a poor credit history may prevent you from getting a lease on an apartment.

How to Build and Maintain a Good Credit History

There are many things you can do to build and maintain a good credit history. Here are the most important do's and don'ts.

Do's

- Always try to pay your bills on time.
- Pay at least the required minimum monthly payment shown on your statement.
- Contact your creditors if you're having trouble making payments.
- Make sure your monthly account statement doesn't contain errors.
- Read your statements and other mailings from your credit card company carefully – this way you'll always be up to date about any fee increases or rule changes.
- Request your credit file from the credit bureaus at least once a year and make sure it is accurate.
- Deal with companies you know and trust.

Don'ts

- Never accept or use any form of credit until you understand and are comfortable with its terms and conditions. This will avoid misunderstandings between you and the credit issuer.
- Never wait to report unauthorized transactions on your account. Contact your credit issuer immediately.
- Never exceed the credit limit on your credit card.

Protecting Yourself from Unauthorized Transactions

If your credit card or your credit card account number falls into the wrong hands, you may suffer a great deal of inconvenience and possible financial loss. Here are some simple ways to protect yourself:

- As soon as you receive a new credit card, sign the back. Cancel and destroy any cards you no longer need.
- Make sure your monthly credit card statement lists only the transactions you made during the month. If you notice any unauthorized transactions, report them immediately to your credit card issuer.
- Don't give personal information or your credit card account number over the phone or the Internet unless you're dealing with a company you know and trust.
- Keep your personal information safe. This includes your date of birth, your social insurance number (SIN) and all your other personal identification.
- Request your credit file from the credit bureaus at least once a year to make sure it's accurate.
- Keep any record of your personal identification number (PIN) separate from your credit card and never disclose it to anyone.

What to Do If You Find Unauthorized Transactions on Your Account

If you find unauthorized transactions on your credit card account, follow these steps to find out whether you can be reimbursed:

1. Contact your credit card issuer immediately and report the unauthorized transactions. Also inform your local police.
2. Check your credit card agreement. By law, your agreement must explain your maximum liability (usually $50) in the case of lost or stolen credit cards, or the unauthorized use of your credit card account number.
3. Find out if your credit card issuer has what is known as a “zero-liability policy” on unauthorized transactions. Visa, MasterCard and American Express cardholders are protected beyond the maximum liability found in their credit card agreements. This is done through a public commitment that Visa, MasterCard and American Express call the “zero-liability policy.” If your credit card is lost or stolen, or if someone uses your account number to make transactions you didn’t authorize, you can usually be reimbursed.

The zero-liability policy applies to transactions made on the Internet, by phone or at retailers. However, it may exclude personal identification number (PIN)-based transactions – for example, a cash advance made with your card at an automated banking machine (ABM). It may also exclude transactions made with convenience cheques, or transactions made on corporate credit cards.

Find out from your credit card issuers whether they have such a policy and how you can be protected. This type of policy is not usually listed in a credit card agreement, since it is a public commitment and not a legal requirement.

To sum up, having a good credit history is essential for many of the things you'll need and want to do – buy a car, own a home, take a vacation. By following the basic precautions in this booklet, you'll have a better chance of having access to credit when you need it.

Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit

Annual interest rate, cash advance, grace period, prime rate, security deposit ... these are all important terms that you'll find in the Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit. Many of the terms you'll find in your credit card agreement are also defined here.

Your Rights and Responsibilities

Credit cards are handy. They're not only a convenient way to buy things, but they also help you build a good credit history. That's very important when you apply for another loan such as a mortgage or a car loan.

At the same time, using credit cards unwisely may get you into more debt than you can handle. That's why it's important to know about the rights and responsibilities that come with a credit card and to understand your card's features, terms and conditions. Doing so will save you time and money, and will help you stay out of financial trouble.

This booklet tells you about your rights and responsibilities with respect to credit cards issued by financial institutions regulated by the Government of Canada. It will also help you understand what you should look for in a credit card and will give you some tips about using credit wisely. By using the booklet's handy checklists, you will be able to quickly identify the information you need, to get the most out of a credit card.

Shopping Around for a Credit Card

When you're shopping around for a credit card, there are certain things you can expect from a credit card company. Either in the credit card application, advertisements or when you call the issuer, they must tell you:

- the card's annual interest rate, which is the interest you will have to pay on the outstanding balance on your card;
- the grace period, which is the time between the statement date and the payment due date; and
- about any other charges or fees that might apply to your use of the card.

At the same time, you're responsible for deciding whether the features of the credit card are the ones that meet your needs. Before you apply for a card, you need to find out:

- how the credit card issuer calculates interest;
- what you need to do to benefit from the grace period;
- the minimum payment you have to make each month;
- the details of a low introductory rate (if any), including what types of transactions the offer applies to and the regular interest rate after the introductory period ends; and
- any reward programs or other benefits that come with the card.

When You Receive Your New Card

When your credit card arrives, it will have a card agreement or contract with it. This agreement outlines the major terms and conditions of the card, so you should read it carefully, understand it and keep it for your records.

The card agreement must tell you:

- the card's annual interest rate;
- how the interest is calculated;
- the grace period, if any;
- how often you will receive your statements (it must be at least once a month);
- whether you have to pay the balance in full when you receive your statement, and the interest rate that applies if you don't;
- your minimum monthly payment and how it's calculated;
- your initial credit limit, unless the credit card issuer hasn't determined it yet (in this case, the issuer must give you this information with or before your first statement);
- about any optional services you may wish to have, such as credit balance insurance, and the charges for each optional service;
- any other charges or fees that may apply;
- a telephone number that you can call during business hours to obtain information about your account.

Finally, the agreement must also tell you the maximum amount you would have to pay if your credit card was lost or stolen and if someone used it illegally. This maximum amount applies only until you inform the credit card issuer that the card has been lost or stolen. As soon as you report it, you're no longer liable for any misuse of the card. This is why it's important to report a stolen or lost card right away.

When You Receive Your Statement

In each statement it sends you, the credit card issuer must give you the following information:

- a description of each transaction made during the period covered by the statement and the amount charged, including interest;
- the date each transaction was posted to your account;
- the amount you must pay, on or before a specified due date, to benefit from the grace period; and
- the amounts during that month for your:
  - purchases;
  - advances;
  - payments;
  - interest charges; and
  - non-interest charges.

When Your Credit Card Agreement Changes

When your credit card issuer changes any features, terms or conditions of your credit card, they must give you the details of those changes in writing. They must do this at least 30 days before the change goes into effect.

However, there are some changes to your credit card's terms and conditions that don't require advance notice. For the following changes, the issuer must inform you within 30 days after they take effect:

- a change to your credit limit;
- an extension of your grace period;
- a decrease in a charge that is not related to the interest rate;
- a change to any optional service you accepted; and
- if you have a variable-interest-rate card, the change to your interest rate as a result of a change in the reference rate.

The information and tips provided in this booklet will help you manage your credit card use and avoid any difficulties with your account. If a problem does arise, knowing about your rights and responsibilities will make it easier for you to understand the issue and to get it resolved quickly and easily.

Annual interest rate, cash advance, grace period, prime rate, security deposit ... these are all important terms that you'll find in the Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit. Many of the terms you'll find in your credit card agreement are also defined here.

Understanding the Terms and Conditions of Your Card

Credit cards can be extremely useful and convenient. They've become part of our lives, and it can be hard to get along in today's world without one.

You'll get more out of a credit card if it's the right one for you. You'll also probably save money and manage your finances more effectively if you know how your credit card works.

This guide will help you understand credit cards. If you're looking for your first card or for a new one, be sure to explore options such as specialized credit cards, student cards and more. We've also included a handy checklist at the back of the guide to help you choose your credit card.

If you've received an offer of a card with a low introductory rate, this guide will give you more information about these offers, too. Or, if your credit card statement is puzzling you, read the sections that talk about interest calculations and interest-free periods. At the end of this guide, we give you tips to help you save money on interest and fees.

While credit cards are indispensable for most people, they do come with potential risks. You can manage these risks better if you know what they are. Here's a quick look at these benefits and risks.

Benefits

A credit card can:

- help you establish a credit history and earn a credit rating;
- be more convenient to carry than cash;
- offer free use of funds, provided you always pay your balance in full, by the due date;
- give you incentives, such as reward points, that you can redeem for merchandise or services; and
- provide a convenient payment method for purchases made on the Internet and over the telephone.

Risks

On the other hand, credit cards can:

- allow you to build up more debt than you can handle;
- damage your credit rating if your payments are late;
- have complicated terms and conditions; and
- cost much more than other forms of credit, such as a line of credit or a personal loan.

Four Steps to Choosing a Credit Card

Choosing the right credit card is much easier if you know what you're looking for and understand what the various credit card issuers are offering. Here are four steps you can follow to help you decide which card is best for you.

Step 1: Know your needs and wants

Ask yourself:

- How much will I spend on the card each month?
- Will I be able to pay my balance in full each month?
- Would I benefit from any reward programs?
- Am I prepared to pay an annual fee?

Step 2: Use Table 1 or Flowchart 1 to help you choose the right type of credit card

- There are many types of credit cards, including specialized cards. For more information on specialized cards, see Table 1 (on page 6).
- If you can't benefit from a specialized card, use Flowchart 1 on page 7 to help you choose another type of credit card that meets your needs.

Step 3: Once you've selected the type of card, shop around

To compare the features and costs of cards from different issuers, see the comparison tables provided with this kit. If you did not receive comparison tables, contact FCAC and we'll send you a free copy.

Step 4: Before you make your final choice, make sure you understand all the terms and conditions of your credit card

This step will save you a lot of time and money! By understanding the terms and conditions of your credit card, you'll get more out of it. At the same time, you'll minimize the drawbacks of using the card. Make sure you know:

- the interest rate charged on purchases, cash advances and balance transfers;
- how the interest is calculated;
- the annual fee and other applicable fees;
- the grace period (see page 15);
- the minimum monthly payment;
- what happens if you make your payments late;
- other features such as introductory offers (see page 10);
- the order of transactions and how your payment will be applied; and
- how to make a complaint if you have a problem with your credit card.

A credit card agreement is a legally binding contract. Make sure you understand all its terms and conditions before you use your card. And if something isn't completely clear to you, ask questions!

For additional help on how to choose credit card that works best for you, see Your Credit Card Checklist on page 19, or use the Worksheet to Help You Choose a Credit Card provided in this kit.

Flowchart 1

Answer the two questions below to find what type of card is right for you.

1. Are you a student with a limited income?

☐ Yes.

A student credit card may be right for you.

- If you carry a balance (if you don't pay the balance in full each month), a low interest rate is important. You should consider a low-rate student card.
- If you don't carry a balance, the interest rate is less important. You should consider a regular-rate student card.

☐ No.

Go to Question 2 on the next page.

Comparison Tables	Low-Rate Student Card Features
Student Cards (Low-Rate) + Service Fees on Visa, MasterCard and American Express Credit Card Transactions	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Geared specifically to students with lower income</li> <li>• Credit limit usually around $500</li> <li>• Annual interest rate around 12%</li> <li>• Generally has an annual fee. Make sure your savings on the interest outweigh your annual fee. To learn more about saving money with a low-rate card, see Managing Your Money, available in this kit.</li> <li>• Can help build a credit history</li> <li>• Often has reward programs such as discounts in bookstores or clothing stores</li> </ul>

Comparison Tables	Regular-Rate Student Card Features
Student Cards (Regular-Rate) + Service Fees on Visa, MasterCard and American Express Credit Card Transactions	Same features as above, except: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Annual interest rate is around 18%</li> <li>• Generally has no annual fee</li> </ul>

Flowchart 1 (continued)

2. Do you need special insurance options, such as car rental insurance or medical travel insurance?

☐ Yes.

A Gold or Platinum credit card may be right for you.

- If you carry a balance (if you don't pay the balance in full each month), a low interest rate is important. You should consider a low-rate Gold or Platinum card.

- If you don't carry a balance, the interest rate is less important. You should consider a regular-rate Gold or Platinum card.

☐ No.

Go to the next page.

If you don't need a card with Gold or Platinum features, a standard credit card is probably right for you.

- If you carry a balance (if you don't pay the balance in full each month), a low interest rate is important. You should consider a low-rate standard card.
- If you don't carry a balance, the interest rate is less important. You should consider a regular-rate standard card.

Understanding Low Introductory Rates

Credit card issuers frequently offer an attractive introductory interest rate on newly issued cards, or on balance transfers to your existing card. If you tend to carry a balance on a credit card, this kind of offer may save you money.

However, you should realize that these low rates generally apply for a limited time only. As soon as the introductory period ends, the rate increases to the card's regular rate. To find out what the regular rate is, ask the issuer or refer to the comparison tables in this kit.

Before applying for an introductory offer, make sure you understand its terms and conditions. Ask the credit card issuer:

- what types of transactions the introductory rate applies to;
- when the introductory period will end;
- what the interest rate will be after the introductory period ends;
- whether the introductory rate will end if you make a late payment or go over your card's credit limit;
- what the order of transactions is and how your payment will be applied; and
- whether any other fees or conditions apply.

Don't base your credit card decision solely on one factor such as an attractive introductory rate. Make sure you understand all the features and conditions of a card before you accept it.

Getting the Most from Low Introductory Rates

Before you accept a credit card with a low introductory rate, find out which types of transactions the offer applies to. If the low introductory rate applies only to balance transfers and/or cash advances (and not to purchases), limit your new purchases until you pay off the transfers and the advances. This will save you money in the long run.

If you make purchases while carrying a balance, you may reduce the money you can save on your transfers and advances. There are two reasons for this.

You'll lose the interest-free period on new purchases

If you don't pay off your entire balance at the end of the first month (including all purchases, cash advances and balance transfers), you lose the interest-free period on new purchases (see pages 15 to 17 for an explanation of interest-free periods). This means that you begin paying interest on your new purchases from the date you make them or, in some cases, from the day they are posted to your account. The interest is usually at the credit card's regular and higher rate.

Your payments will be applied to the lower-interest-rate balance first

Most institutions apply your payments to balance transfers and cash advances before they apply them to purchases. This is called the "order of transactions" related to payments.

If you make a cash advance or balance transfer at a low introductory rate, and then purchase something, you end up reducing your potential savings. This is because you're paying off the lower-interest-rate debt (your transfer or advance) first, while carrying the higher-interest-rate debt (your purchase) for a longer time.

However, the order of transactions may vary from one institution to another. Ask your credit card issuer to explain how its order of transactions applies to your payments.

Example: Getting the Most from Low Introductory Rates

In both of the following cases:

- On May 1, you transfer a balance of $5,000 from an old card to a new one to benefit from the low introductory rate.
- Your new card has a 6 per cent introductory rate on balance transfers, and an 18 per cent interest rate on purchases.
- Your payments are applied first to balance transfers, then to purchases.
- You'll have a $5,000 balance remaining, but you'll pay $9.06 less interest in Case 1.

Case 1:

- You make no other purchases during the month.
- You'll pay $25.47 in interest charges.

Case 2:

- A few days after the transfer, you make a purchase of $1,000 on your new card.
- The day after your purchase, you make a partial payment of $1,000 to bring the balance back to $5,000.
- You'll pay $34.53 in interest charges.

Case 1: No other purchases	Outstanding balance
May 1: Balance transfer	$5,000
May 31: Outstanding balance	$5,000
Interest rate on balance transfer	6%
Interest charged for May	$25.47*
* $$5,000 \times (6\% \text{ interest rate} \div 365 [\text{days in a year}] \times 31 \text{ days}) = $25.47$

Case 2: Additional purchase of $1,000	Outstanding balance
	From the balance transfer	From the purchase
May 1: Balance transfer	$5,000
May 5: Purchase of $1,000		$1,000
May 6: Partial payment of $1,000 (applied to balance transfer)	$4,000
May 31: Total outstanding balance = $5,000	$4,000	$1,000
Interest rate on each balance	6%	18%
Interest charged for May	$21.21*	$13.32
Total interest charged for May	$34.53
* Balance transfer: $[$5,000 \times (6\% \text{ interest rate} \div 365 [\text{days in a year}] \times 5 \text{ days}) + $4,000 \times (6\% \text{ interest rate} \div 365 [\text{days in a year}] \times 26 \text{ days})] = $21.21$
 Purchase: $[$0 \times (18\% \text{ interest rate} \div 365 [\text{days in a year}] \times 4 \text{ days}) + $1,000 \times (18\% \text{ interest rate} \div 365 [\text{days in a year}] \times 27 \text{ days})] = $13.32$

How Interest Charges Are Calculated

If you always pay the amount owing on your credit card by the payment due date, you never have to pay interest.

If you don't pay the amount owing on your credit card in full, by the due date, your credit card issuer will charge you interest depending on the type of transaction: a new purchase, a previous purchase, a cash advance or a balance transfer.

New purchases

- These are purchases that appear on your monthly statement for the first time.
- They can be interest-free under certain conditions (see the section on interest-free periods on page 15).

Previous purchases

- These are purchases that were listed on a previous statement and not paid off.
- You're charged interest from the date you made these purchases until they're paid for in full. Some credit card issuers charge interest from the date the purchases are posted to your account.

Cash advances and balance transfers

- You're charged interest from the date you made the cash advance or balance transfer.
- You don't benefit from an interest-free period on these transactions.

When your credit card company calculates the interest you owe, it normally uses either the "average daily balance method" or the

"daily balance method". Although the two methods differ in their way of calculating interest, they generally yield the same interest charge. To find out which method your credit issuer uses, check your credit card agreement or contact the issuer.

Here's how both methods work:

Average daily balance method

The average daily balance on your credit card is the balance you carried during the billing period, averaged by the number of days in the billing period (usually 30 or 31). Your average daily balance is calculated at month's end by adding the balance at the end of each day, then dividing the total by the number of days in the billing period. To calculate the interest charged for the month, you multiply the average daily balance by the daily interest rate (obtained by taking the annual interest rate and dividing by the number of days in the year [365]); then you multiply the result by the number of days in the billing period.

Daily balance method

Whereas the average daily balance method only makes a month-end calculation of the interest owed, this method calculates interest owed at the end of each day of the billing period. To calculate the daily interest charge, you multiply the daily balance by the daily interest rate (obtained by taking the annual interest rate and dividing by the number of days in the year [365]). Next, add up the resulting daily interest charges to obtain the amount of interest charged for the month.

Example: Methods of Calculating Interest

The following example shows how the two methods work.

Mrs. Smith received her new credit card on January 1. On January 5, she made a purchase of $3,000. Her January statement, which covers her transactions between January 1 and January 31 (a 31-day billing period), has a payment due date of February 19.

Let's assume that Mrs. Smith didn't pay her bill in full, by the due date. This means that the grace period didn't apply to her new purchase, so interest is calculated from the purchase date of January 5. (For an explanation of why the grace period didn't apply, go to page 16.)

Let's assume also that Mrs. Smith didn't buy anything on her credit card during February. When her February statement arrives, it shows a charge of approximately \$41 in interest for the month, based on an annual interest rate of 18.5%. The daily interest rate of 0.05068%, shown in the calculations below, is the annual interest rate divided by the number of days in the year ( $18.5\% \div 365$ ).

	Average Daily Balance Method	Daily Balance Method
January 1 to January 4 – No transactions	$0 for 4 days	$$0 \times (0.05068\%) = $0$ $$0 \times 4 \text{ days} = $0$
January 5 to January 31 – Purchase of $3,000	$3,000 for 27 days	$$3,000 \times (0.05068\%) = $1.52$ $$1.52 \times 27 \text{ days} = $41.05$
Calculation of Average Daily Balance	$\frac{($0 \times 4 \text{ days}) + ($3,000 \times 27 \text{ days})}{31 \text{ days in the billing period}}$ $= \text{Average daily balance of } \mathbf{$2,612.90}$	Not applicable
Total Interest Charged<sup>1</sup>	Average daily balance x Daily interest rate x Number of days in the billing period $= $2,612.90 \times 0.05068\% \times 31 \text{ days} = \mathbf{$41.05}$	$$0 + $41.05 = \mathbf{$41.05}$

Understanding the Interest-Free Period on New Purchases

You benefit from an interest-free period when you buy something with your credit card and the credit card company doesn't start charging you interest on the purchase right away. In other words, you're getting credit without having to pay for it. Be careful, the interest-free period doesn't always apply to your new purchases. See the section "Determining If the Interest-Free Period Applies" for more information.

It's important to remember that the interest-free period doesn't apply to balance transfers or cash advances. With these transactions, interest is charged immediately.

The interest-free period on new purchases starts on the date you make a purchase and ends when the credit card issuer begins charging you interest on that purchase. The interest-free period has two parts:

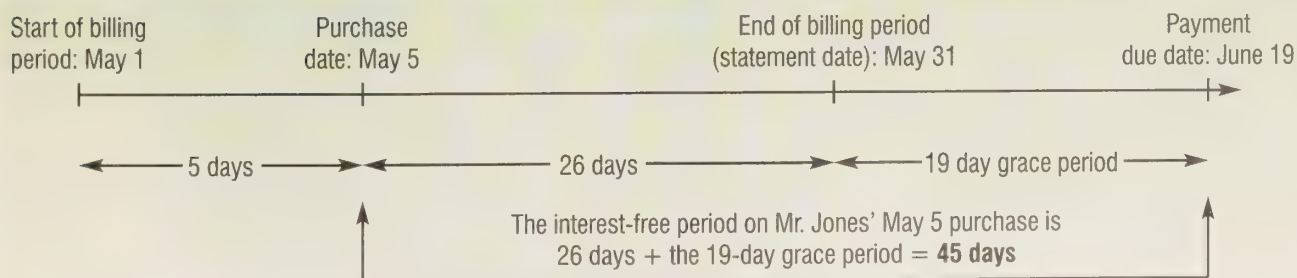

- the time between the purchase and your statement date; and
- the time between your statement date and your payment due date. This is called the grace period, and can vary from 15 to 26 days. To find out the length of the grace period for your credit card, see the comparison tables provided with this kit or ask your credit card issuer.

Here's an example of an interest-free period:

- Mr. Jones' statement covers transactions he made between May 1 and May 31 (31-day billing period).
- Mr. Jones made a new purchase on May 5.
- His payment due date is June 19. Therefore, the grace period provided by his credit card issuer is 19 days.

The total interest-free period on the purchase Mr. Jones made on May 5 is 45 days, but it only applies if he meets certain conditions (see "Determining If the Interest-Free Period Applies" on page 16).

Determining If the Interest-Free Period Applies

Credit card issuers use one of two methods to decide whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases:

- Method 1: With this method, the interest-free period applies to your new purchases only if you pay your current month's balance in full, by the due date.
  - Method 2: With this method, the interest-free period applies to your new purchases only if you pay your current month's balance in full, by the due date, and you have also paid your previous month's balance in full, by the due date (in other words, you're not carrying a balance from the previous month).
- If Mr. Jones' credit card issuer uses Method 1
Mr. Jones will have to pay interest only on the $2,000 carried over from April. He will get the interest-free period on his new purchase of $1,000, because he paid his current balance in full, by the due date of June 19.
  - If Mr. Jones' credit card issuer uses Method 2
Mr. Jones will have to pay interest on the $2,000 carried over from April and on the new purchase of $1,000, because Mr. Jones carried a balance over from April.

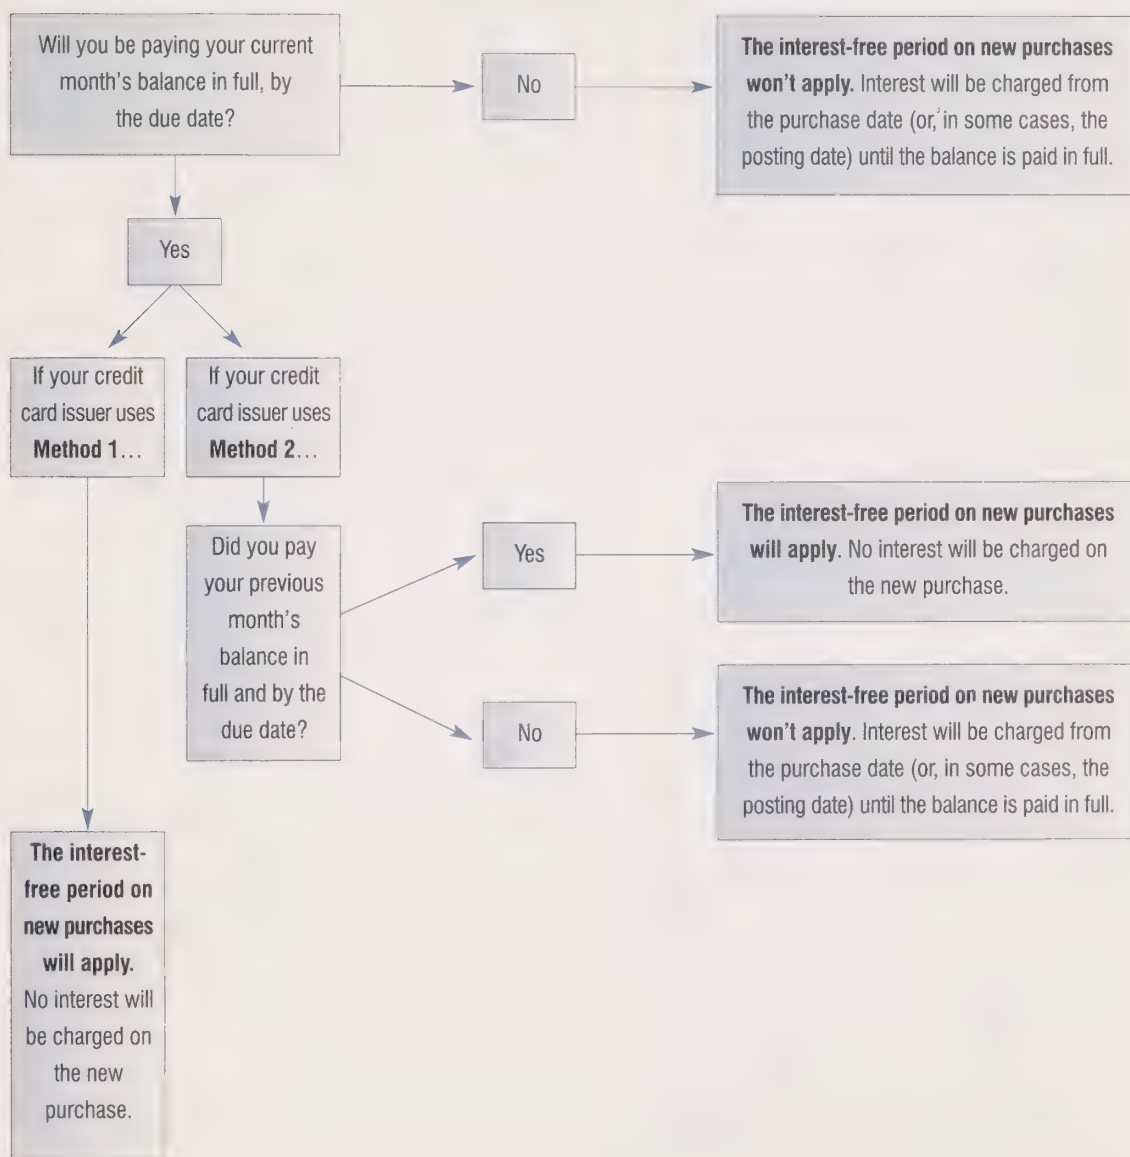

As an example, let's look at Mr. Jones. He didn't pay his April balance in full, so he carried a balance of $2,000 from that month. On May 5, he made a new purchase of $1,000. He paid his new balance in full, by the due date shown on his statement (June 19). Here's how the two different methods would affect him.

To find out which method your credit card issuer uses, ask your issuer or refer to the comparison tables provided in this kit.

Flowchart 2

Follow the flowchart below to find out whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases. Remember to check the comparison tables provided with this kit to see whether your credit card issuer uses Method 1 or Method 2.

Tips to Help You Save Money

There are lots of ways to get the best value from your credit card and avoid situations that might cost you money.

Ask questions

If you're puzzled about some aspect of your credit card, ask your credit card issuer about it. Their answer may help you make better financial choices.

---

Don't base your credit card choice on just one factor

Low introductory rates or reward programs may not be what you really need. Look for the package that best suits your overall financial situation.

If possible, pay your balance in full each month

If you can't, transfer the balance to a form of credit with a lower annual interest rate, such as a line of credit. If you do this every month, you'll always benefit from the grace period on your credit card. In your monthly budget, include the amount needed to pay off your outstanding balance as quickly as possible.

Make early payments between statements

If you carry a balance on a credit card, interest is normally charged from the date you make a purchase until you pay it in full. Making an early payment will save you interest charges. For more information on how to save money by paying your bills early, see Managing Your Money: How to Save with a Credit Card, available in this kit.

Take cash advances only when absolutely necessary

Use cash advances for short-term or emergency situations only. That's because interest on advances is charged from the time you borrow until the time you pay the advance in full. In addition, there are usually service fees associated with a cash advance. If you must take a cash advance, make a payment to your credit issuer as soon as possible. This will avoid daily interest charges, which add up in a hurry.

Allow time for your payment to reach your credit card company

If you don't, you may end up making a late payment that could affect whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases, and could also negatively affect your credit history. For more information on the effects of late payments, see Managing Your Money: How to Save with a Credit Card, available in this kit.

Take advantage of pre-authorized payments

Consider making your monthly credit card payments automatically from your bank account to ensure that your payments are never late. But remember to keep track of these payments so that your account always has enough money to cover them. For more information on pre-authorized payments, see Managing Your Money: How to Save with a Credit Card, available in this kit.

Read your statements and other mailings from your credit card company carefully

This way you'll always be up to date about any fee increases or rule changes.

Your Credit Card Checklist

Here's a handy checklist of questions you should ask yourself and the credit card issuer when you're looking for a credit card. Be sure to take these questions, and the Worksheet to Help You Choose a Credit Card provided in this kit with you when you comparison-shop.

Ask yourself:

- How much credit can I handle?
- Will I be able to pay my balance in full each month?
- Would I benefit from a rewards program?
- Am I prepared to pay an annual fee?
- Do I shop at a particular retailer often enough to benefit from their card?
- Have I shopped around for the credit card that best suits my needs?

When you're checking out the terms and conditions of the card:

- What are its annual fee or other applicable fees?
- What is the minimum monthly payment?
- What is the interest rate on purchases, cash advances and balance transfers?
- How is interest calculated?
- How long is the grace period?
- What are the consequences of late payments?
- What features or enhancements are offered?
- What customer service or support is available for the card?

When considering an introductory low-rate offer:

- To which type(s) of transactions does the introductory low rate apply?
- When does the introductory period end?
- What interest rate will apply at the end of the introductory period?
- Are there any other fees or conditions that apply to the offer?
- Will the introductory rate period end if I make a late payment or if I go over my card limit, and if so, what will the new rate be?
- What is the "order of transactions" for my payments?
- Will this "order of transactions" affect any savings I may get with a low introductory rate?

Glossary of Key Terms Used in This Kit

Annual Fee	A charge levied each year for use of a credit card. It's billed directly to your monthly statement. However, many credit cards come without an annual fee.
Annual Interest Rate	The annual interest rate charged on purchases that don't benefit from the interest-free period. There is no interest-free period for cash advances or balance transfers, and interest is charged from the day you withdraw the funds.
Balance Transfer	The transfer of an outstanding credit card balance from one card to another, usually between different institutions. The new card issuer usually charges interest from the day the amount is transferred to the new card — there is no interest-free period.
Cash Advance	The withdrawal of funds from your credit card, up to the credit limit allowed. The amount you withdraw may be subject to daily limits. There is no interest-free period, so interest is charged from the day you withdraw the funds.
Convenience Cheque	A cheque provided by the credit card issuer and drawn on your credit card account. You can use a convenience cheque the same way you would a personal cheque. When you use a convenience cheque, the transaction is treated as a cash advance for the purposes of calculating interest charges – there is no interest-free period and you're charged interest until you pay back the amount of the cheque in full.
Grace Period	The grace period is the time between the statement date and the payment due date, and is determined by the credit card issuer. The grace period usually varies between 15 and 26 days and is part of the interest-free period. The grace period may not apply unless you meet certain conditions.

Interest-Free Period	The interest-free period on new purchases starts on the date you make a purchase and ends when the credit card issuer begins charging you interest on that purchase. The interest-free period includes the grace period determined by the credit card issuer. It may not apply unless certain conditions are met.
Method 1	The method used by some credit card issuers to determine whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases. With this method, it applies only if you pay your current month's balance in full by the due date.
Method 2	The method used by some credit card issuers to determine whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases. With this method, it applies only if you pay your current month's balance in full by the due date, and you have also paid your previous month's balance in full by the due date (in other words, you're not carrying a balance from the previous month).
Minimum Payment	The minimum amount payable each month on your credit card balance.
Penalty Interest Rate	The rate at which penalty charges are calculated. It only applies to charge cards.
Prime Rate	The interest rate a financial institution charges on loans to its best customers.
Reference Rate	A base rate, such as the Prime Rate, used in the calculations of variable credit card interest rates.
Reward Program	A program offered by credit card issuers that gives cardholders rewards for using their credit card. You collect reward points every time you charge a purchase to your card. You can usually redeem these points in merchandise, travel or cash, depending on the program.
Security Deposit	The amount you deposit with a credit card issuer as security to obtain a secured credit card.

Worksheet to Help You Choose a Credit Card

Annual Fee: In general, you should compare the annual fee to the interest rate charged on the card. For example, compare a credit card with an annual interest rate of 18.5% and a $0 annual fee, to a card with an annual interest rate of 12.9% and an annual fee of $15. Usually, if you carry a balance on your credit card, you are better off paying a small annual fee to benefit from the lower interest rate. For more information, refer to Managing Your Money, available in this kit.

Annual Interest Rate: In many cases, the annual interest rate on purchases is different from the one on cash advances and balance transfers, for the same card. Which type of transactions will you be making the most often? You should look for a card with the lowest interest rate for that type. Sometimes a credit issuer will offer an introductory low-rate offer on a higher-interest credit card. These offers apply only for a limited period of time, and usually to a specific type of transaction. If you are considering an introductory low-rate offer, refer to Getting the Most from Your Credit Card, available in this kit.

Grace Period: A longer grace period is always better. If the interest-free period applies to your new purchases, a longer grace period will give you more time to pay. However, if the interest-free period does not apply, then you should pay your credit card bill as soon as you receive your statement to pay less in interest charges. Waiting until the due date on your statement will only make you incur more interest charges.

See Getting the Most from Your Credit Card, available in this kit, to find out whether the interest-free period applies to your new purchases.

Rewards Program: If you use your credit card for convenience only and not to carry a balance (that is, you normally pay off your credit card in full each month), rewards programs could be beneficial to you. You can normally accumulate points that you can redeem for merchandise, travel, and more. Rewards programs are not useful for people carrying a balance because points accumulate only when you make purchases using your credit card. You must normally make a very large amount of purchases before you have enough points to begin redeeming them for something of value to you.

Insurance, Other Benefits or Optional Services: If you travel often, or are in need of an optional service such as credit balance insurance, compare the benefits that already come with the card, and compare additional benefits that could be useful to you. It may be very costly for you to purchase benefits or insurance as an option. You might be better off finding an alternative with another company offering this service.

Service Fees: Service fees generally add a lot of cost to your credit card transactions. Normally, cash advance fees and foreign currency conversion fees are the most costly. If you make these types of transactions often, find a card with a low fee for this service.

<sup>1</sup> If the grace period does not apply, interest on purchases is calculated from the date of purchase of the item – or, in some cases, the date the item is posted to your account.

<sup>2</sup> For cash advances or balance transfers, interest is always calculated from the date funds are borrowed. There is no grace period.

<sup>3</sup> The grace period is part of the interest-free period. It represents the number of days between the statement date and the payment due date, during which new purchases are interest-free if you meet the conditions of the method (Method 1 [M1] or Method 2 [M2]) used by the issuer. The actual interest-free period could be longer, depending on the date of purchase of the item. See Getting the Most from Your Credit Card for more information on the interest-free period and the conditions set out by M1 and M2.

<sup>2</sup> For cash advances or balance transfers, interest is always calculated from the date funds are borrowed. There is no grace period.

The grace period is not the same for all cards. It represents the number of days between the purchase date and the payment due date, during which new purchases are interest-free if you meet the conditions of the method (Method 1 (M1) or Method 2 (M2)) used by the issuer. The actual grace period may vary depending on the type of purchase of the item. See Getting the Most from Your Credit Card for more information on the interest-free period and the conditions set out by M1 and M2.

The Annual Fees and Extra Cards Fees are shown in dollars and cents. They are for the first year of the card and may vary in subsequent years. They may also be payable in installments. Check the website for more information on the fees and the conditions of the card. Check with the credit card issuer for more details.

<sup>1</sup> If the grace period does not apply, interest on purchases is calculated from the date of purchase of the item – or, in some cases, the date the item is posted to your account.

<sup>2</sup> For cash advances or balance transfers, interest is always calculated from the date funds are borrowed. There is no grace period.

<sup>3</sup> The grace period is part of the interest-free period. It represents the number of days between the statement date and the payment due date, during which new purchases are interest-free if you meet the conditions of the method (Method 1 [M1] or Method 2 [M2]) used by the issuer. The actual interest-free period could be longer, depending on the card you use to purchase the item. See Getting the Most from Your Credit Card for more information on the interest-free period and the conditions set out by M1 and M2.

<sup>4</sup> This is only a partial list of all rewards and benefits offered by credit card issuers. If a specific benefit is not included as part of a credit card package, it may still be available for an additional cost. Furthermore, some insurance coverage may not be available to all customers due to age limits or other conditions that may apply. Check with the credit card issuer for more details.

<sup>1</sup> Some retailers charge less interest because they calculate interest from the date the statement is issued rather than from the date an item is purchased.

As of September 2001, new Zellers and Hudson's Bay credit cards are issued under the HBC brand. A number of Zellers and Hudson's Bay credit cards issued prior to September 1, 2001 are still in circulation.

The grace period is part of the interest-free period. To choose a credit card that is best suited to your needs, you should examine your credit card agreement and understand all the terms and conditions of the credit card, including all the fees related to various transactions you make inside and outside Canada.

Depending on how you use your credit card, these fees could add up substantially. Just as the annual percentage rates, annual fees and interest-free periods can vary from one issuer to another, so can the various fees for the services they offer. Know your credit card behaviour and shop around for a card that has reasonable fees for the services you use most often.

Some issuers may offer additional services, free of charge, that are not listed in the table below. The “—” symbol represents no fee; “N/A” means the service is not offered.

Converting the Amount of a Transaction Made Outside Canada into Canadian Currency	Inactive Account Charge	Purchases of Wire Transfers, Money Orders, Bets, Lottery Tickets or Casino Gaming Chips	Reprinting a Statement	Making a Copy of a Transaction Record (Sales Slip)

Service Fees on Retail Credit Card Transactions

To choose a credit card that is best suited to your needs, you should examine your credit card agreement and understand all the terms and conditions of the credit card, including all the fees related to various transactions you make inside and outside Canada.

Depending on how you use your credit card, these fees could add up substantially. Just as the annual percentage rates, annual fees and interest-free periods can vary from one issuer to another, so can the various fees for the services they offer. Know your credit card behaviour and shop around for a card that has reasonable fees for the services you use most often.

Some issuers may offer additional services, free of charge, that are not listed in the table below. The “—” symbol represents no fee; “N/A” means the service is not offered.

Secured Credit Cards

A secured credit card might be for you if:

- You need to build a credit history
or rebuild a poor credit rating
- You are having difficulty obtaining other types of credit cards

Protecting Consumers  Informing Canadians

Canada

How Secured Credit Cards Work

Most credit cards offered to consumers are considered unsecured. This means that the consumer usually doesn't have to make a security deposit to obtain the card. Unsecured credit cards usually include standard, gold and platinum (both low-rate and regular-rate), retail credit cards and charge cards.

However, a secured card may be suitable for you if you're having trouble obtaining an unsecured credit card because:

- you have no credit history;
- you've had credit problems in the past and want to rebuild your credit rating;
- you've recently filed for bankruptcy; or
- you're new to Canada.

What You'll Need to Obtain a Secured Credit Card

To obtain a secured card, you'll need to deposit a sum of money with the credit card issuer. Depending on the credit limit you request, the required security deposit for a secured card can range from a few hundred to several thousand dollars.

As well as the security deposit, you may be charged a one-time "set-up" or application fee. Before you apply for a secured card, be sure to ask the credit issuer whether you will have to pay a fee and whether it will be refunded if your application is turned down.

Your credit limit is normally set as a percentage (usually 100 per cent or more) of your deposit. For example, if you provide the credit card issuer with a deposit of $500, you may be granted a credit limit of $500 or more. If you don't make your credit card payments, the credit issuer may use your deposit to pay down your credit card balance.

However, making all your credit card payments on time will help you build a credit history or rebuild a poor credit rating. Once your credit rating is considered satisfactory by a credit issuer, you may be eligible for an unsecured credit card such as a low-rate or regular-rate standard card. At this time, the security deposit may be returned to you if you decide to close your credit card account after paying off the entire balance.

Interest Rates and Other Fees That May Apply

Secured credit cards normally have a higher interest rate than unsecured cards. Secured credit cards also usually have monthly or annual fees and, like other cards, have service fees associated with some transactions (for more details, see the Service Fees on Visa, MasterCard, and American Express Credit Card Transactions comparison table included in this kit).

Interest and Insurance on Your Security Deposit

Most secured credit card issuers will pay you interest on your security deposit.

The financial institution that holds your deposit is either your credit issuer (if it accepts deposits), or another financial institution chosen by the issuer. No matter who holds your security deposit, check with your card issuer to see if your deposit is insured with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation (CDIC) or a provincial deposit insurance corporation. Every province also has a deposit insurance corporation that protects deposits held at the financial institutions it regulates.

CDIC insures deposits (up to a limit of $60,000) held in financial institutions regulated by the Government of Canada. This protects you if the financial institution holding your deposit declares bankruptcy. For more information, visit CDIC's Web site at www.cdic.ca or call CDIC toll-free at 1-800-461-2342.

Tips for Finding a Secured Card

Before applying for a secured credit card, check your credit file periodically with the three credit rating bureaus in Canada (TransUnion, Equifax and Northern Credit Bureaus Inc.). If your credit file contains an error, have the error corrected immediately, since it may prevent you from getting an unsecured card. For more information on getting a copy of your credit file or correcting errors, see Playing it Safe available in this kit.

Here are some precautions you should take when looking for a secured card:

- Be cautious about secured card offers from unknown institutions. If you have doubts about the integrity of a secured credit card offer, contact FCAC toll-free at 1-866-461-3222.
- Beware of secured card offers from issuers outside Canada. If you have problems, it may be difficult to resolve them if the company is not located in Canada.
- Avoid offers for secured cards that do not have a recognized brand name such as VISA, MasterCard or American Express. These cards may only be accepted at a small number of stores or may require you to make purchases from a specific catalogue.
- Read and make sure you understand all the terms and conditions associated with a secured card before you accept it.

<sup>1</sup> If the grace period does not apply, interest on purchases is calculated from the date of purchase of the item – or, in some cases, the date the item is posted to your account.

<sup>2</sup> For cash advances or balance transfers, interest is always calculated from the date funds are borrowed. There is no grace period.

<sup>3</sup> The grace period is part of the interest-free period. It represents the number of days between the statement date and the payment due date, during which new purchases are interest-free if you meet the conditions of the method (Method 1 [M1] or Method 2 [M2]) used by the issuer. The actual interest-free period could be longer, depending on the date of purchase of the item. See Getting the Most from Your Credit Card for more information on the interest-free period and the conditions set out by M1 and M2.

<sup>4</sup> This is not a complete list of all rewards and benefits offered by credit card issuers. If a specific benefit is not included as part of a credit card package, it may still be available at an additional cost. Furthermore, some insurance coverage may not be available to all customers due to age limits or other conditions that may apply. Check with the credit card issuer for more details.
